

INTEGRATING HIV PREVENTION INTO WOMEN'S WELLNESS

Reframing HIV Risk

- Racism, geography, trauma experiences, and other non-behavioral factors are drivers of HIV vulnerability; it is important for providers to account for these factors by being more inclusive in who is offered HIV testing and prevention tools, including PrEP
- The language and framing of “risk” often proves not to be relevant to how women view their lives. There is an urgent need for providers to engage in dialogue that prioritizes overall wellness, especially in the context of HIV prevention

Access discussion guide and resources: bit.ly/HCPSexHealthTalk